Your Signature Leadership Strengths

Your leadership strengths are your most powerful differentiators. Identifying, embracing, and unleashing these strengths can form the foundation of an extraordinary career.

To identify yours:

Step 1: Go through the list of 100 Leadership Qualities. Highlight all of the qualities you already see in yourself and any you'd like to improve on. (If there's a strength you possess that is not yet listed, feel free to add it.)

Step 2: Next, narrow down to the 10 qualities that best represent how you'd like to lead. Focus on your strengths and innate leadership style.

Step 3: From your list of 10, pick the 3 qualities that best represent the leadership strengths you'd most like to own and be known for 12 months from today. You can partly achieve this by grouping similar qualities into one category such as "Sees the big picture" and "Sets the vision and direction." In your group of 3, try to include two that you're already strong in and one that's more aspirational—one you're still growing into, but that you feel predisposed to become great at.

Bonus steps: Put your three leadership strengths somewhere where you'll see the words every day as a reminder to play up these qualities and unapologetically own the heck out of them.

You can also show the list of 100 Leadership Qualities to a few people who know you well. Ask them to identify 3 attributes that best describe your leadership strengths.
